Schattschneider Leaving Seminary Deanship

David A. Schattschneider, vice president and dean of Moravian Theological Seminary, recently announced his resignation after serving in the position for twelve years. David will continue as dean until June of next year and will then pursue several projects related to the history of the modern Moravian Church. The Seminary's Board of Trustees has begun the search process for his replacement.

As vice president and dean, David has nurtured the professional development of the faculty, reshaped the administrative structure of the Seminary, and encouraged the incorporation of technology into the Seminary's program. "Over a period of 12 years, David has provided vision and effective leadership for an institution that has now emerged at the forefront of ecumenical education in the United States," said President Rokke. "David's scholarship as a church historian has been impressive and we look forward to his continued contributions," Rokke added.

Throughout his life, the Moravian Church has been central to David. He is the son of the Rt. Rev. and Mrs. Allen Schattschneider. His early years were spent in Moravian parsonages, in the context of service to the Moravian Church. He received his B.A. from Moravian College, his M.Div. from Yale Divinity

Joseph Kennedy to Lecture at Moravian College

The Cohen Arts and Lectures Committee presents a timely discussion featuring Joseph P. Kennedy II, titled "Beyond Politics: Working Together to Meet the Challenges of the New Millennium," on Thursday, October 19, at 8:00 p.m. Joseph Kennedy will paint a dramatic picture of the need for action by government, individuals, and the business community to meet the social and economic challenges of the new century.

Throughout his career, Joseph P. Kennedy II has sought innovative ways to use the marketplace to address urgent social issues. At Citizens Energy Corporation, the non-profit company he founded in 1979, Kennedy used a series of oil ventures to finance the purchase of low cost home heating oil for the poor and elderly. In succeeding years under his leadership, Citizens Energy capitalized on market opportunities to lower the price of electricity, natural gas, and prescription drugs for consumers struggling to make ends meet.

During his 12 years in Congress, Kennedy successfully sought ways of using the private sector to improve social and economic conditions in communities suffering disinvestment. His legislative initiatives
