Power and Religion in Ancient Greece

May Term (May 12–24, 2020)

IDIS 296

This course serves as a vivid, first-hand introduction to the religious history and archaeology of ancient Greece, through which students will come to appreciate some of the founding elements of our own modern society. In viewing the archaeological remains, both on-site and in the museums, we concentrate on what the remains can tell us about the social, political, and religious systems of Greece.
