Tools available through Momentum

– Explore a student's network
Can see other instructors, advisors, coaches, and other support for the students, with the option to send a direct message.

– See student course load and degree progress information
See other courses a student is taking, or has taken already. Details available depend on your role with the student.

– Monitor or contribute toward tracking items
When you raise a flag, you can see when and how the issue is addressed. Easier to monitor follow-through!

Using Momentum as an INSTRUCTOR

– Complete progress survey (2x/semester)
– Raise flags
  – Attendance concern
    Has a student's absences caused you to be concerned about their success in your class? The threshold for raising this flag depends on your own pedagogy and attendance policy.

  – Missing/Late Assignments
    Most critical if you are seeing a pattern of missing work, a missed major assignment, or other reasons to be concerned about the missing work. Could also indicate poor performance.

  – In Danger of Failing
    A more critical flag asking for immediate intervention

  – Behavioral concern
    When the student's behavior (in or out of class) is proving disruptive to the student's or to other students' learning

  – General Concern
    If you're concern does not seem to fit in any of the other categories

  – Kudos
    Positive encouragement contributes to student success. Particularly helpful when a student has shown improvement.

– Monitor raised flags
Absences due to illness/injury and other alerts about students in your class will be shared through Momentum. You will get an e-mail notification in such an event (remember you can customize how you receive alters), but you can also monitor updates in Momentum.

Questions about Momentum and early alerts

— Will we be taking attendance in Momentum?
Not right now. We are experimenting with different solutions to tracking attendance, so we ask all faculty to continue using Roll Call in Canvas to take attendance for Fall 2017.

— Why is there an attendance flag if I'm taking attendance?
We will be tracking attendance to confirm class attendance, identify the last day that a student has attended class, and to have a record of attendance when SHARE is assessing intervention need. However, the instructor can best alert us to when attendance is impacting student success in a class.

— Why can't I just send an e-mail like I used to?
If you have concerns about a student, you can still send e-mail to StudentSuccess@moravian.edu. We will then add a flag to the system for you. Using the Momentum to track responses is important to ensure that (a) we close the loop on concerns that have been raised and (b) we can identify places where we need to improve our campus structures.

— Who can I talk to if I have feedback or suggestions about Momentum?
Feel free to e-mail hartshornk@moravian.edu or studentsuccess@moravian.edu.

— Where can I find more information about Momentum?
The student success page (https://www.moravian.edu/provost/student-success) will have links to information for using Momentum and new features that have been added to help us respond to students. We hope to have it up and running by the first week of classes.

New features in development!

Success Plans and Notes are not yet implemented at Moravian, but listen for new updates. We hope to roll out both features during the coming year.
