Guidelines for being an Advisor

Campus organizations are required to have at least one active advisor who is a full-time faculty or staff member, generally of their own choosing, or who has been hired by the College (with the appropriate vice president's approval) for the specific purpose of serving in the advising capacity. The advisors inform organizations of all matters pertaining to the group's operation and function, but they do not have unilateral control over policy, nor are they responsible for actions or omissions of the organization or its members. All campus organization advisors are expected to participate in group training or meet individually with the director of student involvement within the first term of their acceptance of this responsibility and periodically as deemed necessary thereafter.

Individuals without formal Moravian affiliation seeking to serve as secondary, off-campus advisors to student organizations are required to complete an application process with the director of student involvement prior to beginning service. Service in such capacity is a privilege which shall be reevaluated annually or, should there be circumstances of potential concern or conflict, at the most appropriate time.

BENEFITS OF ADVISING

There are many benefits associated with becoming an advisor to a student organization. Here are some:

- * The satisfaction of seeing and helping students learn and develop new skills
- * Watching a group come together to share common interests, work toward goals, and gain an understanding of differences
- * Developing a personal relationship with students
- * Furthering personal goals or interests by choosing to work with an organization that reflects one's interests
- * Sharing one's knowledge with others

ADVISOR ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Each advisor perceives his/her relation to a student organization differently. Some advisors play very active roles, attending regular meetings, working closely with student officers, and assisting in program planning and development. Others maintain a more distant relationship to the organization. It is expected that each advisor will maintain some regular contact with his/her organization. An advisor accepts responsibility for keeping informed about activities of the organization and for advising officers on the appropriateness and general merits of policies and activities. However, advisors are not responsible for the actions or policies of student organizations, students are solely responsible. Advisors should be both accessible and interested and should provide whatever counsel the group or its members may seek.

Given the wide range of purposes, activities, and objectives of various student groups, the role of the advisor will vary in some degree. The purpose of this section is to outline basic roles of an advisor. As groups vary in their expectations and needs, it is important that the advisor develop an understanding with the organization you are to represent as to the nature of your involvement.

- Attend at least two (2) general meetings per semester
- Have regular meetings with the officers to discuss organizational goals and direction
- Support the group
- Be familiar with the group's constitution, mission, structure, and goals
- Learn the history and traditions of the group
- Be knowledgeable about appropriate College policies
- Ensure that the group submits all required registration and financial paperwork
- Be available to students and serve as a resource for the group
- Recognize the general financial condition of the organization
- Monitor the group's functions and encourage all members to actively participate
- Assist when conflict arises between group members
- Sign all documents which require an advisor's approval (i.e., purchases)
- Provide honest feedback and positive reinforcement to group members
- Share your experience and expertise when appropriate
- Have the flexibility to serve several functions (mentor, resource person, educator, mediator, team builder, motivator, etc.)

Following are some of the roles you may assume as an advisor:

MENTOR

Many students will come to see their advisor as a mentor and the success of these relationships can last many years and be rewarding for both the student and the advisor. If the student is seeking an education and career in your field, you may be asked to assist in his/her professional development. Share your knowledge and expertise as well as be willing to connect students to a network of professionals. At times, students will seek out someone to assist with personal development. In this capacity, a mentor will have a basic understanding of student needs and perspectives, a desire to challenge students intellectually and emotionally while providing support, and the ability to listen to students.

TEAM BUILDER

When new officers are elected or new members join the organization, you may need to take the initiative in turning the students from individuals with separate goals and expectations into a team. Team building is important because it enhances the relationships of students between one another and the advisor. Positive relationships help the organization succeed and to work through conflicts and difficult times.

If you need team building resources, please contact the director of student involvement.

CONFLICT MEDIATOR

Students are going to join the organization with different agendas, goals, and ideas about how things should function and the direction they should be taking. When working with students who have come into conflict, it may be necessary to meet with them and have them discuss their issues with each other. Ask them how they think they can work together, point out the organization's mission, and ask how their conduct is helping the group achieve its mission. Sometimes, one student may be causing problems with other students. In many cases, the student may not realize that his/her actions are causing a problem. Speaking with the student individually could be helpful to discuss how his/her attitudes are impacting other people and how those attitudes or actions can be changed.

REFLECTIVE AGENT

One of the most essential components to learning in "out of classroom" activities is providing time for students to reflect on how and what they are doing. As an advisor, you will want your officers to talk to you about how they think they are performing and their strengths and weaknesses. Give them the opportunity to discuss their thoughts on their performance. Then be honest with them. Let them know when you agree with their self-perceptions and in a tactful manner let them know when you disagree. Remember, any criticism you provide students should be constructive and you will want to provide concrete example of actions the student took that seem to contradict their self-perceptions.

EDUCATOR

As an advisor, your role of educator will often come through the role modeling of behavior, guiding the student in reflection of their actions, and being there to answer questions. One of the most difficult actions to take as an advisor is to do nothing, but sometimes this can be the most important action of all. Allow the students to make their own decisions even if they are different with your ideas. Sometimes, students will succeed; other times, they may fail – and that is okay! The key is to return to the role of the reflective agent and give the students a safe place to reflect on their experiences.

MOTIVATOR

You may have to motivate students to excel and to carry out their plans and achieve their goals. Some students are easily encouraged and at the first sign of difficulty they may want to quit. You will need to be their “cheerleader” to keep them excited about all of the potential successes they will experience. You can motivate students through the recognition of their efforts, appealing to their desire to create change, and to connecting their experiences at Moravian College to the experiences they will have in their career and/or community.

POLICY INTERPRETER

Student organizations operate under policies and procedures. At times, students may not be aware of these policies and they will do things in an inappropriate manner. The more you know about these policies and procedures the better advising you can give to your students.

FINANCIAL CONSULTANT

You may be asked to assist with budgeting and ensuring the group is being fiscally responsible with institution funds. Students may seek guidance with the annual budget and funding request process. In addition, advisors are required to approve all organization purposes prior to purchase. Advisors should work closely with treasurer to ensure that adequate funding is available for anticipated purchases.

As an advisor you will assume numerous roles. A key idea to remember is that you an advisor not the leader. You provide guidance, insight, and perspective to students as they work on projects, but you should not be doing the work. Students will learn if they are engaged. Be careful of being challenged into doing the work for a student-run project. The students make the decisions, and they are accountable for those decisions, and for the successes and failures of their group.

OFFICER TRANSITION

One of the most important functions of an advisor is to assist in the transition from one set of officers to the next. As the stability of the organization the advisor has seen changes, knows what works and can help maintain continuity. Investing time in a good officer transition early on will be beneficial! The key to a successful transition is making sure new officers know their jobs before they take office. Expectations should be clearly defined. It should be a team effort – outgoing officers can train and work closely with incoming officers in order to understand the responsibilities of their position and the overview of the club functions. Advisor can help facilitate this process.
